

Gardening tour at Watanabeking

We had seen now already some and to the conclusion we drove then still to a small market garden which cultivated besides also still Hepatica. Actually, there was everything here, from perennials, summer flowers and small woody plants, at the same time gardens were also created. An all around Servus in the matter of plants thus. The hepatica, which we had come for, were in a glass house on tables, with the lower layer filled with plants. Space is scarce in Japan. Here, too, Ishikawa, in the old manner, were selecting their specialties for the next exhibitions as plants for sale. A quite normal procedure in Japan and elsewhere, "buying and selling". Only that here the group members are treated preferentially and considered, "Klan Ishikawa"! Gunther and I looked around as usual and found exceptional specimens here as well. Now we went back to our hotel in Niigata, we were excited about the exhibition.

Translated with www.DeepL.com/Translator (free version)

Hepatica im Glashaus, Ishikawa auf Pflanzensuche

Werbung für die nächste Ausstellung